

PRESIDENT AIDS; GIRL IS ABASHED

Ruth Donaldson Escapes Injury
When Thrown From Horse in Wilson's Presence.

"Now, why do you suppose somebody had to tell me?"

This was what Ruth Donaldson, the twelve-year-old daughter of R. Golden Donaldson, a prominent Washington attorney, wanted to know today when asked about her experience in Rock Creek Park when she was thrown from her horse and President Wilson went to her aid.

Miss Donaldson is a member of a coterie of young horsewomen who have been riding together almost every day since they were old enough to cling to a saddle. In fact, it was about five years ago that Ruth took her first lesson on a horseback. Now, any young lady who has been riding for five years considers herself an adept horsewoman, and doesn't relish the thought of having it published broadcast that she was thrown from her mount.

It seems, however, that the horse the girl was riding yesterday afternoon was a new one which she was just breaking in. President Wilson, Secretary Tumulty and Dr. Cary T. Grayson were walking through the park when their attention was attracted by a riderless horse galloping along the road. They were near the hurdles about a quarter of a mile north of Pierce Mill and living on the ground they saw little Miss Donaldson.

All three hurried to her assistance, but in the meantime the girl had scrambled to her feet. Dr. Grayson is a personal friend of Mr. Donaldson and immediately recognized Ruth.

"Are you hurt?" inquired the President, as he took hold of the girl's arm. "Oh, no," she replied, "I've ridden a long time; I'm used to little falls like this one."

In the meantime the horse had been caught by Miss Helen McLanahan, who was riding with her. She mounted it and rode away. The accident was caused by both young women trying to enter a bridle path from the road at the same time. The horses came together. Little Miss Donaldson's mount bolted and she was thrown.

"We never knew a thing about the accident until a newspaper man called me up last night," said Mr. Donaldson today. "Ruth has been riding for several years and she was much abashed that any one should come along just at the time she met with an accident. She was not hurt in the least."
